Snack is a Vista gadget that will make you fall in love with fruits and veggies. When you open it up it will display a color coded image of a food item that you can select to be that day's lunch. The food was preselected by the creator of the gadget but you can select a fruit or vegetable. After you select which fruit or vegetable you want for the day you can click next to start your meal. The text for the various fruit and vegetable items can be changed by you but if you want real fruit or vegetables you can click the button and it will take you to the Whole Foods Web site where it will tell you what to do and you can make a purchase. About Chris Pirillo Chris Pirillo has been running the site since 2010. He's been covering gadgets, apps, and everything in between for almost a decade at this point. He loves shooting and reviewing stuff across a variety of platforms. You can find him on Twitter at @pirilloz and on YouTube at If you're looking for something a bit more refined, I'm going to give you a few choices. The first of these options is called "Bliss" and it's a bit of a game-changer. It's a surprise; it's a puzzle, really, where you have to take images of the food and then use those pictures to create an entirely new meal. It comes to you from the same folks that bring you Pinch, as well as Snack. Get the FULL VERSION of Snack by grabbing Snack Gadget by Kaspersky on Kaspersky's Web site. The FULL VERSION of Snack includes all of the improvements that were made over the past few releases. I installed this on Windows Vista Ultimate and I couldn't be happier with the results. If you're looking for something with a bit more of a changeup, Kaspersky has a gadget called Snack. It's a gadget that will provide an interesting alternative to the usual lunchtime routine. If you're a visual learner, then I'm going to show you how to get the FULL VERSION of Snack. Snack has a bit of a different twist on the usual lunchtime routine. Instead
