Download it from: Changelog: Version 1.1.4.1 + Add Mac OS X 10.10.5+ support Version 1.1.3 + Bug fix - if you click "no" after reading about the keymacro, then choose a product key, the program will automatically select the correct key Version 1.1.2 + Bug fix - issue on the "read FAQ" page was with the "ask me later" checkbox. It used to be unchecked when reading the FAQ that was the problem. Now it is checked when reading the FAQ so if you didn't read the FAQ it is "checked" and you won't have to read the FAQ Version 1.1.1 + Minor bug fix Version 1.1 + Implemented "ask me later" checkbox. After reading FAQ or the "what you need to know" page, you can "check" or "uncheck" the "ask me later" checkbox. If you check it then you won't be prompted for a product key until you exit the program. If you uncheck it then you will be prompted for a product key when you exit the program. If you leave the checkbox unchecked then you can read about the keymacro at any time but will be prompted for a key after exiting the program. + Added "ask me later" checkbox to the FAQ page. You can read the FAQ 77a5ca646e

StripEm removes all those annoying characters from forwarded emails, automatically. Allows you to read the message cleanly again with the added benefit of also being able to save the email message to a text file, or a word document, or even print out an email message with NO EDITIONS. This program is for Windows users only. Not for Macintosh or UNIX. >>>'s are not part of Windows. Only Windows is listed for "Version:". Any help would be appreciated. I have attached a zip of the program. I don't know if it has gotten any updates, so I am still keeping it at version 1.0.0.0. Sorry for my spelling. It is a desktop program, not an on-line version. A: You need to contact StripeM directly for an update as it is not a product that Microsoft supports. This article might help you with their FAQ: If you need to have it work, you can try using Keep in mind that as soon as you send an email it is out of date and not secure. I would suggest you use a service that you keep secure on your own computer and not someone else's server. What's New In StripEm?

StripEm is a small freeware utility that strips characters from the start and end of files as well as removing extra blank spaces from the end of a file. StripeEm can also strip extra spaces and blank lines from emails, and display the date of the message and sender. If your OS is 64-bit, then you can use the 64-bit version of StripEm (StripEm64). If your OS is 32-bit, you can still use StripEm, but you need to start it with /dw32 If you have any questions about StripEm, please let me know. If you want to see a stripem demo or just use StripEm, email me or visit How to use StripEm: StripEm cannot remove extra blank spaces in the middle of a file. That's what "strip" does. If you don't want StripEm to do that, then you can use the optional "remove trailing blank lines" checkbox (Startup/Programs/StripEm/Options/Extra stripping). Before you start, remember you need to restart your computer after you unzip the zip file, or you will not be able to run StripEm. If this happens, be sure to back up your email messages first. StripEm does not remove extra blank spaces in a text file. (Example:). If you don't want StripEm to remove those, then you need to use "strip" on your email files. You can use StripEm in either GUI or DOS mode. You do not need to restart your computer for either mode. 1) Open the GUI. 2) Click the button that says "Run". 3) Hit Browse and find the folder you want to strip. 4) You can leave the "Remove trailing blank lines" box unchecked. This removes blank lines at the end of the file. You can also optionally tick the "strip extra spaces" box and that will remove extra spaces at the beginning of the file. You can also optionally tick the "strip the end of files" box to strip the characters at the end of the file. 5) To select only the files and directories you want to remove the extra spaces, tick the "Only show items with these extensions" box. A list of file extensions will be displayed. 6) Hit Ok and StripEm will begin working. 7) You can hit Ctrl-C to stop StripEm. You can also hit Ctrl-Z to pause StripEm and then Ctrl-C to stop. When you resume, the working directory will be the one you were in before you hit Ctrl-Z. If you want to save the file you are working on, then before
