Photoshop is expensive, especially if you want to develop your Photoshop skills and learn the best tools for specific purposes. Although the program has a lot of nice features, including many effects, it's also an expensive product to buy. A full-version Photoshop CS4 retails for around $800. Choosing a photo retouching program Mac users may have tried and rejected programs like Photoshop Elements for not providing enough features, or Pixelmator for its limited capabilities. For Windows users who are sophisticated enough to use a photo editing program, one of these photo editing programs is a good choice. As an example of a photo retouching program, Photoshop is shown in Figure 15-3. There are a lot of photo editing programs out there, so it pays to choose carefully. The following list provides a quick rundown of the pros and cons of these programs: Adobe Photoshop: Adobe Photoshop is a massive and expensive program that is generally expensive. Many advanced users do fine with Photoshop, but it's not really designed for beginners. Plus, compared with other programs, it uses more space on the computer. That may not matter if your computer's hard drive is large, but if it's a small computer, Photoshop will take up too much space. For the money, you get the best professional photo editing tool, but can learn the fine points of usage from a free tutorial online. Photoshop Elements: Similar to Photoshop but for the home user and integrated into Windows, Photoshop Elements is a free photo editing program. Photoshop Elements is geared toward the beginner who wants to make basic edits but still does a few advanced things. It includes many features that you won't find in other programs. This program works well for people who don't want the advanced features of Photoshop and who want to work with photos that they want to be free of blemishes and backgrounds. It's still a little expensive for nonprofessionals, however, as it doesn't support some of the advanced editing features and it's not as feature-rich as Photoshop. Corel PaintShop Photo Pro: PaintShop Photo Pro is a professionally produced program that's geared toward advanced users who want to get into photo retouching. This program is a little tricky to work with for beginners, but if you want to learn something about this type of photo editing, this is your program. It can handle high-resolution images easily, and includes many features useful for photo retouch

Background ===== Fatty acids (FAs) are important for the maintenance of normal CNS function. The biosynthesis of FAs in the brain is modulated by hypothalamic factors (e.g. leptin and insulin). Insulin has been shown to regulate CPT-1 mRNA expression (the rate-limiting enzyme for FA and cholesterol synthesis) in several rat brain regions. In the present study, we have investigated whether insulin mediates post-transcriptional regulation of CP-T-1 mRNA through the FA sensing SREBP-1c. Materials and methods ===== An insulin deficient rat model was used and hypothalamic tissue lysates analyzed by Western blot. To further determine the mechanism of post-transcriptional regulation of CP-T-1 mRNA, we used the Insulin resistance model in HEK293 cells and the silencing of β -adrenergic (β -AR) receptors with siRNA. Results ===== Western blotting revealed a \sim 50% reduction of the SREBP-1c protein in hypothalami of insulin deficient rats, which was accompanied by a \sim 45% reduction in the hepatic CPT-1 mRNA level. In vitro studies indicated that in HEK293 cells, treatment with insulin increased the CPT-1 mRNA level and this was accompanied by increased expression of SREBP-1c and the protein level of HMG CoA reductase (the rate limiting enzyme of FA synthesis) upon insulin stimulation. In addition, we found a significant increase in the nuclear protein levels of both SREBP-1c and HMG CoA reductase. We also found that siRNA-mediated knockdown of β 2-AR in the HEK293 cells impaired the insulin-induced increase in the CPT-1 mRNA level, which was accompanied by reduced protein level of SREBP-1c. Conclusions ===== We show for the first time that insulin is able to regulate CPT-1 mRNA expression through both transcriptional and post-transcriptional mechanism in a rat hypothalamic cell line, HEK293. We also provide evidence that insulin signaling through β 2-AR is a crucial molecular mechanism mediating post-transcriptional regulation of CPT-1 mRNA. These data provide new insights into the regulation of FA metabolism in the brain and could explain how changes in energy homeostasis affect the FA metabolism in hypothalamus and the
