

Adobe Photoshop CC [Win/Mac]

Note Starting with Photoshop CS4, the Save As feature has been redesigned. A new dialog box, in the Computer section, is the default location for saving. You can also save your work directly to a drive and folder using the Open dialog box. Using the Save dialog box, with changes made in Photoshop or other image-editing software, as the destination saves you from having to keep track of the file locations and locations of your images when you save.

Q: Emacs-record on OSX
My computer crashed yesterday, and I lost most of my files. I'm running Mavericks, and I was running Emacs-record on the macbook. Is there an easy way to recover these recordings? A: Your file system is corrupted and you can't do much about it, the best you can do is consider reinstalling macOS and redo your recordings, I don't know how easy that is in your situation, but I guess it's better than doing nothing.

A: Emacs Recordings could be stored as backup files into your Hard Disk or in your Dropbox folder. However, because this type of backup is not usually enabled by default in OS X (i.e. the backup can't be easily restored to the same or another device), please consider using a backup service if you have one. If the backup files are not there you can open the terminal and access to your home folder where you will have:

`/Users//Library/Application`

Support/Emacs/ And in your folder you will find the backup files of Emacs Recordings. You can open Emacs Recordings by opening the terminal and typing: `open -a /Applications/Emacs.app` You'll have to do this for each session in order to recover all the Emacs Recordings files. Q: Dynamic GraphicsView subclass and MouseListener - How to get MouseInfo? I have subclass DynamicGraphicView to get access to MouseInfo and MouseMotionListener in the Form class to get MouseInfo at the desired Point and Motion etc. I can create a new instance and add a MouseListener and it works fine - BUT, I want to have the `DynamicGraphicView` to receive the mouse events. How can I do this? What I do right now is `this.getMouseEventInfo().setSource(this);` in the `MouseListener`, but I feel that's wrong. Another way I thought about is to use `MouseAdapter`, but I have no idea how to get the `MouseEventInfo` in there...

A: For what it's worth, here is a mouse listener that will at least allow you to access the MouseEvent properties: class DynamicMouseAdapter

implements MouseListener { private Dynamic

What's New In Adobe Photoshop CC?

The Hand Tool allows you to draw on an image and shapes within the canvas will follow your movement of the mouse. The Magic Wand is an advanced tool for selecting objects and areas of an image. It is usually used for removing unwanted objects like dust and scratches, but can also be used for selection. The Pen Tool can be used to draw freehand on a canvas, and objects on the canvas will be traced automatically.

Language of the future

lobo_tuerto It seems interesting to me that in the "Language of refer to Python, PHP and javascript as "mainstream" languages.

bit offended by such an article that is written by a C++ and java developer.
~~~ JerryLun Hello
loobtuerto, I think that comparing PHP, Javascript and Python(with different syntax) to C++ and Java is over ambitious. I think that the "main stream" of now is about which language is used to develop web sites and web services, and not which language is the better programming language. I agree with you, that each programming language has its advantages and disadvantages. But I think that as a programming language is only a tool to write code. Most of the problem solving tasks can be solved with the right tools. ~~~ lobo_tuerto Thanks for taking the time to reply. Q: How to use onclick in ionic2 ion-item I tried to use onclick in ionic 2 like this: HTML: Test TS: test() { console.log("test"); } But it's not working. Here is the screen: But how to do this? I'm using ionic2 v2.1.1, angular2 v2.0.0-beta.15, and
